TRIAL OF CAPITOL GRAFTERS TO BEGIN

Fourteen Men Who Were Indicted for Capital Frauds Are Placed on Trial Today.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 27.—What promises to be the most notable prosecution of alleged public grafters that has ever taken place in this country was begun in the Dauphin county court today, when the cases of four men charged with conspiracy to defraud in building the Pennsylvania capitol were called for trial before Judge Kunkel. Rumors of colossal frauds in connection with the contracts for building and furnishing the new capitol building gained currency even before the building had been completed and dedicated. A capital investigating commission was appointed to probe the matter to the bottom and the result of its report was wholesale indictments of public officials, politicians, contractors, and others. Those were charged with swindling the state to the extent of $5,000,000.

AGE LIMIT REACHED BY VETERAN SOLDIER

Brigadier General Medorem Crawford Is Placed on Retired List of the Army.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 27.—Today, after a distinguished career of more than forty years as an officer of the United States army, Brigadier General Medorem Crawford, who commanded the military detachment which guarded Guiteau the day he was executed, was placed on the retired list of the army on account of having reached the age limit.

General Crawford is a native of Oregon and received his appointment to the military academy from that state in 1863, graduating as a second lieutenant in the Second artillery in 1867. He saw much of frontier duty, and while stationed at Fort Clark in 1878 took part in the expedition into Mexico. During the war with Spain he served in the field at Tampa and Savannah and later commanded two of the camps in the vicinity of Havana. His most recent command was that of Port Wadsworth in New York harbor.

GLADYS VANDERBILT IS A HUNGARIAN COUNTESS

Gladys Vanderbilt And Count Szchenyi Were Married At Noon Today.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, Jan. 27.—The marriage ceremony uniting Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count László Szchenyi of Hungary, was performed a few minutes past noon today at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street. As upon previous occasions when American heiresses have bestowed themselves upon titled foreigners, the ceremony was witnessed by that select and exclusive body known as "society."

The Vanderbilt mansion was guarded by a large number of police officers, specially detailed to hold in check the immense crowd of curious spectators who thronged the side-walks and occupied the doorways and other points of vantage opposite the manders, kept the spectators moving, none being permitted to loiter in front of the house.

Watching the Arrivals.

Every arrival at the house was eagerly scanned by the crowd, but very little could be seen of any of the costumes by outsiders, owing to the curtains, which were closed the entire length of the curbs, and which prevented the guests being seen on alighting from their carriages. The crowd, however, overcome by its desire to catch at least a glimpse of some of the participants, surrounded the carriages which were in line, many women scrabbling and jostling against each other in their eagerness to see the occupants.

At a quarter of twelve, the guests, probably two hundred in all, assembled in the handsome drawing room. At one end of the room stood the altar in white and gold, the scores of tall lighted candles in golden stands reflecting with gorgeous effect upon the golden embroidery.

Floral Decorations Elaborate.

The spacious drawing-room was converted into a veritable conservatory of rare plants and blossoms. On and about the altar were tall golden stands filled with clusters of long-stemmed Easter lilies. The mantelpiece, window-sills and curved nooks were also banded with bridal roses, Easter lilies and lilles of the valley in bewildering confusion. Pink and white predominated in the decorations.

Promptly on the stroke of twelve Mgr. Lavelle and his assistants entered the room and took up their positions on the right and left of the altar, at the south end of the drawing-room. A moment later the two choirs from St. Patrick's cathedral began to sing the wedding chords from Gaite's cantata "Ruth" and the bridal party were heard descending the stairs. The singers were accompanied on the piano by Mr. James C. Unger, organist and musical director of the cathedral.

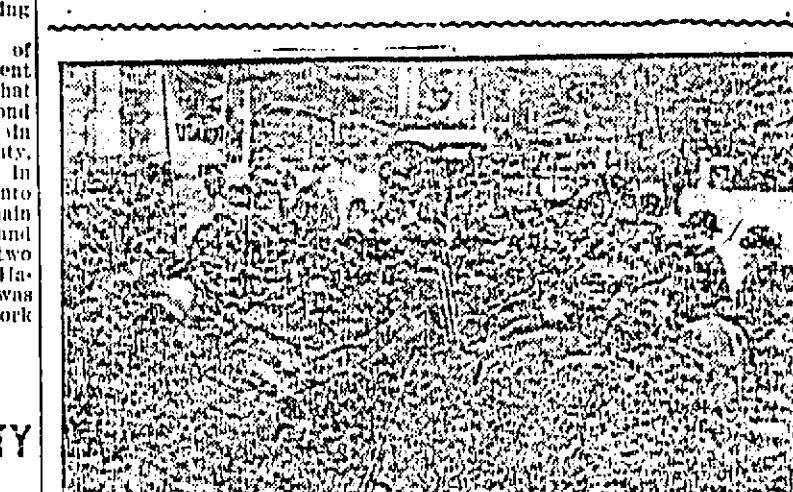

Entrance of the Bride.

The bride entered the wedding party on the arm of her brother, Alfred Glynn Vanderbilt. Next came the bride's mother escorted by Count Digny Szchenyi. Other members of the family followed. (Continued on Page 4)

MRS. FENTON HAS ANOTHER LETTER

INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF HER
SOUTHERN LIFE IS GIVEN.

WRITES OF HER NEW HOME

Remember Janesville Friends and Janesville People—Interesting
Bit of Southern Color.

Below will be found a letter from the pen of Mrs. Fenton, who is now making her home in far-off Alabama. It is a breezy bit of southern life that is well worth reading and enjoying as thoroughly as does Mrs. Fenton enjoy her new home amid the pines and sunshine:

Robertsdale, Alabama, Jan'y 23.
Dear Gazette:

Now that we have passed through the holiday season with reasonably clear heads and sound bodies, I'll try and give you a description of the festivities incident to the occasion. As you all know, Christmas is a great day with the southern people, but perhaps the manner of its celebration may not be known to all of you. In every respect it is very different from Christmas in the north. Even the weather was entirely unsuggestive of the season, and instead of skating, snowballing and other winter sports we had been accustomed to from childhood, all kinds of summer games were indulged in, our favorite one, of course, being croquet. From early morning until five o'clock in the afternoon the entire family spent out of doors among the birds and butterflies. The celebration is very similar to ours at the Fourth of July, and the more noise the better. Huge bonfires are lighted, and these bear no resemblance to those of the north, even when a presidential victory is the object of rejoicing, but born loyalty to my native land leads me to believe that the only reason these fires exceed ours in brilliancy and grandeur is because of the great abundance of fuel, the burning of which is a benefit to the land-owners in that it helps in the clearing of their farms. As the immense logs are full of turpentine you can perhaps imagine what a hot fire results from the application of a match to a great pile of them previously rolled together for this purpose. All day long fire-crackers, revolvers, shotguns, and, in fact, anything that can assist in the unearthly din are brought into use. Bonfires, rockets and balloon ascensions are reserved for evening, and this is supposed to bring the Christmas festivities to a close, but I'm sorry to say that a liberal indulgence of "fire water" on the part of some of the more ardent revellers prolongs it until the new year puts in an appearance. The custom of exchanging gifts may exist here, but I haven't heard of it, and there no doubt are a good many who keep in mind the time, significance of the day. The winter is cold, if one may judge by the strawberry vines she has allowed to become white with blossoms. Dark blue, sweet violets are plenty in the fields now, and early peas have been planted several days, but the who ones consider the spring too backward to risk planting Irish potatoes until the first of February. During the few months of my sojourn in this country I've found that changes of temperature are just as sudden here as in Wisconsin, but of course the mercury never drops out of sight, twenty-six degrees above zero being the lowest record this winter. I think in time this country will present great opportunities for trichologists, as the growing seasons are so long, but a great deal of development is necessary in the way of good roads and better railway service, as well as you could ride just once over the road between this ranch and Robertsdale, and then, if your past, present and future sins remained unforgiven, I should think a mistake had been made somewhere. We had occasion to go after supplies one day after a rain, and in a moment of weakness I agreed to ride with her. There isn't much use of trying to describe that ride, but after a few hard but successful attempts to keep the right side up in the mud road, and noticing that the pony showed a great desire to select his own route, we decided that hansom as he was a native, and we weren't, we would trust to him. Whereupon he struck out through the timber, picking his own way over logs and around stumps, bringing us in safety to Robertsdale and back to the farm. Since then the road has been undergoing repairs and in time travel will be both safer and pleasanter. We are enjoying the life here and the men of the party—Alden, Robinson, Palmer and Maud—are well and are taking on additional avocados, while the children are all fat and healthy. We meet a few people from the Badger state, but they are not settled near enough us to be neighbors. Most of the land right around us is owned by northern people, who are having improvements made, before coming here to live. Pecan trees are being put out by people who expect to make their fortunes from the sale of nuts. These are of the small, wild variety, but are grafted, and the nuts are of immense size and said to sell at one dollar per pound. They will not bring much of an income until they are fifteen years old. I am told hunting and fishing are good, and we can speak a word of praise for the quality of fish, oysters and rabbits, but haven't been fortunate enough yet to bring down any big game. Some of our neighbors have killed a few bears this winter, but we haven't happened to see any. The birds are of almost all kinds from buzzards down to the small wild canary, but the most common are meadowlark, quail, pheasants and bluebirds. Before closing I must tell you that a very short time after my other letter was published in the Gazette I received a postcard from Eden, Texas, and signed "Mrs. J. A. Hodding," extending greetings to Alabama. She said she had read my letter in the Gazette, which is another proof that when Janesville people seek homes in other lands, they consider the Gazette a necessity and while your sturdy carvers plough their way through snowdrifts to deliver it to your home patrons who crowd around the fire, it is brought to us by "foot mail" over the L. & N. road, and read out of doors in the shade. Wishing a prosperous and happy new year for you and all your readers.

I AM AS EVER,
ROSE ALDEN FENTON.

ELBERT E. PALMER, WHO FOUGHT FOR JOHN R.
WALSH IN THE JURY ROOM.

When Elbert E. Palmer, a Harvard farmer, who was a juror in the John R. Walsh case, was asked, "Is this and that your verdict?" by Clerk Bittel, he completely broke down and between sobs, in a broken voice, said: "I will have to say yes." It was this expression from Farmer Palmer that placed him in the limelight. His dramatic reluctance in acknowledging the verdict made voisines of the struggle in the jury room. Immediately he became the object of solicitude on the part of friends and representatives of Walsh. Wherever the jury went thereafter he was followed by a crowd equally divided between Walsh employees and government secret service men. The Walsh people were trying to find out what happened in the jury room, as they will base their appeal from the verdict on the charge that coercion was used in the case of Palmer. Secret service men hovered about watching the movements of the Walsh aples and seeking to prevent Palmer from revealing the secrets of the jury room. On the trial home Palmer broke down completely and is reported as saying: "No I didn't want to sentence J. R. Walsh in my life. I never saw him before that trial and neither did any of the jurors. Personally he is nothing to me—he nor any of his friends, but it is awful to send a man 71 years old to the penitentiary. If I could only go in his place it would be easier to bear."

As he spoke these words the farmer's eyes welled with tears and he buried his face in his handkerchief. "Oh, I wish I had it to do over again," he said when he had regained self-possession. "It might be different another time. But I misunderstood statements that were made to me and didn't understand the Judge's instructions very well on account of my poor hearing. I tell you it was terrible in that jury room. It was awful. Things were said I would never dare repeat." Do you mean that you were threatened in any way, he was asked. "Oh, no, there were no threats. I am no coward and I would have fought the whole bunch of them single handed if there had been any threats made, but you have no idea what leverage was brought to bear to bring out that verdict."

The state's attorneys have no idea that Judge Anderson will allow a new trial and are confident that John R. Walsh will be a fellow prisoner with Barker Frank Bigelow of Milwaukee in Fort Leavenworth inside of two weeks.

Brown laying down the newspaper after reading the details of the recent domestic-financial tragedy—Sad story, sad story. What does it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and has one or two surplus women thrown in?

The total wealth of the United States divided into per capita allotment would figure at $1,758.

The visible assets of the American people, exclusive of lands and estimated valuation of mines and standing timber, are $1,500,000,000,000. Great Britain's visible assets are $500,000,000.

The visible assets of the United States, $1,500,000,000,000, if represented by silver dollars in currency, would make a solid silver belt around the entire world 216 feet wide. There are 32,000,000 workers who earn $13,000,000,000, an average yearly wage of $636.33 for each worker.

The total wealth of the United States divided into per capita allotment would figure at $1,758.

The annual taxes of the country is $7,112,000,000; the annual livestock production is $1,475,000,000, and the annual mining production is $3,000,000,000. These figures go to show there is certainly no reason for pessimism in the United States and that in spite of the present financial scare we have every reason to look upon the year 1908 as a success, and hope that 1908 will be as good to us.

MAIL ORDER TEETH

One of the strong features of the mail order business is that this class of houses advertise to furnish anything from a hairpin to a steam threshing machine.

The man who buys a stove has the same experience, as a farmer in the town of Fulton discovered, not long ago. He also made some other discoveries which surprised him, for instead of a stove, he had invested in an imitation, and the first coal fire wrecked it so completely, that he was obliged to label it, to know what sort of property he owned.

A man out in Iowa bought a shotgun at one of these bargain-counter houses. It was a good looker, and so was the owner, until he fired the first shot. Now he goes around with his head in a sling, minus one side of his face, but he got a bargain in the gun, and that helps some.

This man had a friend by the name of Ham Parsons, who had the misfortune to lose his teeth. Ham was noted for thrift, and in the tooth department of a catalog he found the picture of a genuine ivory set of grinders, warranted to stand all kinds of weather and crosswords, and so cheap that any man could afford to invest. So he ordered, and his experiences with them is thus related by a correspondent in "Michigan Tradesman":

"Ham's new mail-order teeth were powerful ornamentals and went well with nose glasses for Sunday 'dressing,' but he had to keep his spine stiff and single foot when he walked in order to keep them in his head."

The fact that the Union Pacific railroad had laid off 8,000 men, and that other roads are obliged to reduce forces, indicates that it is a good deal easier to block the wheels of progress, than to set them in motion. There will be no lack of transportation facilities for some time to come."

The good people of Sharpsville, Pa., have been prompted to organize a society for the prevention of accidents, which they hope to extend to their state. There is certainly room for this kind of work. Accidents are usually the result of carelessness, and the mission of the new society will be to prevent carelessness. Thus, D. West is president of the new order.

Port Atkinson is suffering from an overdose of reform. The railway company, running through the town, has reduced its force of local employees to the minimum, and the train service is not as satisfactory as heretofore. The people are discovering that it is easier to lead a horse to water, than it is to make him drink.

The fact that the Union Pacific railroad had laid off 8,000 men, and that other roads are obliged to reduce forces, indicates that it is a good deal easier to block the wheels of progress, than to set them in motion. There will be no lack of transportation facilities for some time to come."

The Thaw trial and Clayton audience produced a mania for shooting and drowning, similar in influence to the dime novel. Tragedies like these are of frequent occurrence throughout the country. They might be lessened if yellow journalism was regulated by a strict censorship.

Taft was wise when he redined from New York in favor of Hughes. Taft will be second choice of the delegation.

The people of Illinois are all stirred up over abuses in their state legislature. The governor and legislature have been so busy with primary laws and other far reforms, that everything else has been neglected.

There is an important difference in the way men let themselves to greater responsibilities—some enlarge by growth, others swell up.

The shop man with a burden and calling upon all hands to take hold and lift his load has then a good opportunity to measure his probable capacity as a manager.—Woodcraft.

PROMPT COMPLIANCE WITH MUZZLE ORDER

Majority of Dogs Running at Large Are Properly Fettered Today—Horse Died of Rabies on Polzin Farm.

Owners of dogs have quite generally complied with the city council's emergency order providing that all dogs running at large be muzzled for sixty days, beginning with today. It is therefore, deemed unlikely that hardship will be worked to anyone when the police begin carrying out the provisions of the measure. Naturally, the muzzles are not liked by "Gyp" and "Toyn," and the other members of the canine family, but severe measures are absolutely necessary at this time.

Horse Died of Rabies

After three days of suffering with a disorder that in all its symptoms resembled rabies, a four-year-old horse died Friday night on the John Polzin farm in the town of Center. Attention was first attracted to the animal's strange malady when it tried to bite Mr. Polzin's left arm, failing to inflict a wound, only by reason of the heavy coat he wore. When Dr. R. L. Brown, veterinary surgeon, arrived on the scene the horse, tied in a box stall, was going through all manner of strange, spasmodic movements, pawing, fastening its teeth in its right foreleg and lifting the limb as high as possible, throwing its self on the floor and bounding to its feet again, the crazed beast seemed beside itself with pain. The veterinarian fixed two ounces of chloral hydrate and administered it by the water for which the horse manifested an insatiable craving. Such a dose was sufficient ordinarily to put a horse to sleep under ordinary conditions but had no immediate effect in this instance. Mr. Polzin was unable to throw any light on the question as to when and where the animal could have been bitten by a mad-dog.

The Bank of England once more reduced its rate, this time from 5 to 4 per cent, and the Bank of France from 3 1/2 to 3 per cent to conform to the lower rates of the open market. It is expected that the Bank of Germany will shortly follow suit, leaving rates at that center relatively higher than elsewhere, owing to recent strained conditions in the foreign market.

The decline in interest rates in the United States has naturally been much more precipitous than abroad, for the reason that in the last three months of 1907 the rates here were abnormally high. Everything points to continued easy rates in the American money market; not only on account of lessened demand, but also because of the extraordinary expansion which has recently taken place in our circulation.

"Between the two bank calls of August 22 and December 3, a period of about fifteen weeks, it is estimated that there was an expansion of nearly $275,000,000. In our circulating medium made up of about $50,000,000 in bank notes, $75,000,000 clearing house certificates, $73,000,000 of additional government deposits and $75,000,000 in gold imports.

"This is certainly not an overestimate of the relief extended during the panic; for the total amount of clearing house certificates issued in various cities was considerably above the amount mentioned and the entire gold import movement amounted to nearly $100,000,000."

There is more money than business, and this is likely to be the case for some time to come. The business world is suffering from two causes, namely the panic and the disposition to continue the fight on corporate wealth.

From the former it would soon recover, if given an opportunity, but the latter is more serious, and so long as it continues to menace, there is but little hope that normal conditions will be restored.

Of Course They Said So.

"How did you happen to come to me for your dentistry," said Dr. Richards to a patient recently.

"Why, you see I'm a stranger here," said the party, "and I inspired several people up to what dentist to go to and they all said 'to Dr. Richards' if I wanted 'Painless work.'

"Of course, I didn't want to be hurt and so I came up to you."

"Well, are you sorry you came?"

"Not a bit. You never hurt me in the least."

It's worth something to have such a reputation for Painless Dentistry.

If you need dentistry and wish perfect satisfaction try Dr. Richards.

He "delivers the goods."

FUNERAL AT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

WILL OCCUR TOMORROW MORNING AT 8:45.

INTERMENT AT EDGERTON

Suspicious Marks Were Found on the Dead Woman's Neck This Morning That May Lead to Murder Theory.

Josephine Malone, whose dead body was found in Rock River on Saturday last, will be buried from St. Mary's Catholic church tomorrow morning at 8:45. Rev. W. A. Goebel will read the funeral service and the remains will be taken to Edgerton for interment by the side of her father, Michael and a brother. The remains will be taken late this afternoon to the home of her brother, William Malone, 155 Mineral Point avenue.

CROSS INDICATES THE SPOT WHERE THE BODY WAS FOUND.

Not Suicide.
Father W. A. Goebel does not believe that Miss Malone committed suicide and his action in holding the funeral services at his church is evidence that this theory must be abandoned. Her two brothers, William and Frank Malone, are equally confident that their sister did not take her own life and are urging upon the authorities that they probe the affair thoroughly.

Find Marks.
This morning Drs. Gibson, Merrill and Sutherland made a reexamination of Miss Malone's body and found suspicious marks on the throat which may lead to the presumption of the theory that her death was caused by some insane persons with a malice for murder. This afternoon Dr. St. John, who made the first examination, made a second one. The marks are four in number and closely resemble wounds made by the nails of fingers; three on the right side had cut through the flesh, and one on the left side was similar in nature.

May Investigate.
While City Marshal Appleby holds to the suicide theory it is possible that the new development may cause him to start an exhaustive examination of the affair. Such a research is being urged by District Attorney Fisher, who does not feel warranted in calling a coroner's jury in view of the cost to the taxpayers without any evidence at hand to present to them for their consideration.

Clayton Here.
Frederick J. Clayton, the husband of the dead actress whose body was found a hundred yards away from Miss Malone's a month ago, arrived in Janesville to help any investigation.

ANOTHER MORSE BANK IS CLOSED

NATIONAL OF NORTH AMERICA IN COMPTROLLER'S HANDS.

ITS RESOURCES DRAINED

Persistent Rumors Caused Heavy Withdrawals of Deposits—President W. F. Havemeyer Believes Institution Is Solvent.

New York, Jan. 27.—President W. F. Havemeyer of the National Bank of North America announced in statement issued Sunday night that the directors of the bank had decided to request the comptroller of the currency to assume charge of the affairs of the institution.

Mr. Havemeyer said that, owing to persistent rumors afloat, there had been a continuous drain on the resources of the institution and the indications were that the withdrawals would be so heavy Monday that the bank would be unable to meet them, and that the action placing the affairs of the bank under the charge of the comptroller of the currency had been taken to insure that all depositors would be treated alike.

President Havemeyer declared that he believed the bank was entirely solvent and that with careful liquidation the stockholders will receive par for their stock.

Has Capital of $2,000,000.

The National Bank of North America has a capital of $2,000,000, and on August 22 last, at which time a report was made to the comptroller of the currency, showed deposits of $19,787,400. This sum had been largely and gradually decreased by withdrawals during and subsequent to the panic and on December 3, the date of the next report, there were deposits of $6,924,000, and cash on hand $381,900. Since that time, according to President Havemeyer's statement, the deposits have shrunk still further and now amount to a little over $3,000,000.

The bank, which had been known as the biggest of the Morse string of financial institutions, underwent a reorganization in October. Alfred H. Curtis was succeeded by W. F. Havemeyer as president, the former becoming vice-president in place of C. W. Morse, who retired from the institution. On January 14 there was a further reorganization, Mr. Curtis being dropped from the vice presidency and from the board of directors.

Comptroller of the Currency William B. Ridgely came to New York from Washington Sunday and was in conference with the bank's officials during the afternoon.

Receiver Is Appointed.

Comptroller Ridgely issued a statement Sunday in which he said:

"At the request of the board of directors of the National Bank of North America, the comptroller of the currency has ordered the bank to be closed for liquidation and appointed National Bank Examiner Charles W. Hanna as receiver. The action of the directors was not taken because they considered the bank insolvent, but on account of the difficulty of realizing on the assets of the bank rapidly enough to meet the heavy demands of depositors in the last few days and probably further large withdrawals feared."

With this in view, the members of the assembly announced that the police measure will be reported back favorably with a few amendments and that it will pass the assembly practically by the test vote of 31 to 7.

WELCOME BY ARGENTINA

TORPEDO BOAT FLEET ARRIVES AT BUENOS AIRES.

Lieut. Cone Pleased with Hearty Reception—Little Vessels Had Fine Trip from Rio.

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 27.—Attended by a division of Argentine torpedo boats, the American torpedo boat flotilla, which left Rio Janeiro January 21, entered the port of Buenos Ayres at 8:30 Sunday morning, the arrival being witnessed by a great crowd of spectators.

A few minutes later Commandant Moreno, of the ministry of marine, went aboard the Whipple and welcomed the American officers in behalf of the government of the Argentine republic. The entire extent of the public docks, where berths had been prepared for the visiting fleet, was lined by detachments of marines and prefecture guards.

Almost up to the moment of entering port the weather had been extremely stormy, but it gradually cleared and brought increased numbers of spectators down to the harbor to give silent but hearty welcome to the American sailors. Lieut. Cone, commander of the flotilla, was greatly pleased with the hearty reception. He said that but for the fog which delayed the little vessels about 12 hours outside Rio Janeiro, the passage to Buenos Ayres had been fine.

Every boat in the American flotilla is in excellent condition and made the passage here without a hitch. The boats will remain here until Thursday morning, when they will steam for Sandy Point in the Magellan strait, to join the battleship fleet.

A number of entertainments have been arranged in honor of the visitors, which will include excursions to interesting points, a banquet to be given by the minister of marine, and receptions by the president of the republic and the Naval club. These will take up Monday and Tuesday, and on Wednesday there will be a reception at the American Legation and a number of private parties.

All of the men on the flotilla are in good health.

ANOTHER PORTLAND FIRE.

Flames Do Nearly Million Dollars Damage in Maine City.

Portland, Me., Jan. 27.—Fire broke out shortly after midnight in the wholesale dry goods establishment of Milliken, Consons & Co., and spread to the adjoining store, occupied by A. F. Cox & Son, wholesale shoe dealers. The total loss was about $925,000.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 27.—Eight dwellings, a store and the United Brethren church at Dunlo, near here, were destroyed Sunday night by a fire which was checked only by tearing down a house in the pathway of the flames. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

THAW TRIAL MOVES SWIFTLY.

Present Week Probably Will See End of the Case.

New York, Jan. 27.—The Thaw trial Monday enters upon its fourth and probably its last week. The dispatch with which the present hearing has moved as compared to the trial of a year ago, which stretched over a period of 12 weeks, is little short of remarkable. The defense has another day of evidence to offer and the state should have its rebuttal evidence before the jury by Thursday night.

The defense will offer Monday the three physicians and the trained nurse who arrived on the steamer Adriatic Saturday morning to testify as to alleged irrational outbreaks by Thaw in Europe some ten years ago.

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE NOW.

SENATOR JONATHAN P. DOLLIVER OF IOWA.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa has just introduced a bill in the senate which, if passed, will change materially the control of the public school system of the District of Columbia.

The bill provides in detail that on and after April 1, 1908, the direction and control of the public schools of the District of Columbia shall be transferred from the board of education, and vested in a director of education, who shall succeed to all powers hitherto resident in the board and in such officers of the board—that is to say, superintendent, the assistant superintendent for white and colored schools, and the secretary of the board. Offices of superintendent, assistant superintendent, are abolished by the bill, to take effect April 1, 1908.

It is provided in section 2 of the bill that the director of education shall be appointed by the commissioner of education of the United States for a term of four years, or until his successor shall be appointed; and that no person shall be eligible to the office that is not a graduate of a college or university of recognized standing; have pursued no less than three years of graduate university work of the equivalent, and have held educational positions of superior direction and control for a period of 10 years.

Section 3 provides that the offices of supervising principals shall be abolished to take effect July 1, 1908, and that on and after that date the director of education shall appoint seven assistant directors two of whom shall be colored, for terms not exceeding four years, who shall at all times be under the direction of the director. The director is empowered to dismiss these assistant directors as he may deem advisable, for the good of the service. The director is required to report annually to congress on the first Monday in December.

The only salary fixed by the bill is that of the assistant directors, which is made $3500 a year.

GLADYS VANDERBILT HUNGARIAN COUNTESS

the family group were Count Stephan Szeghely, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Preceding the bride were her attendants, Miss Ruth V. Twenty and Miss Dorothy Whitney, and little Miss Flora Whitney acting as flower girl.

Awaiting the bride at the altar were the bridegroom and his best man, Count Anton Slagay. The bride and bridegroom, surrounded by their attendants and relatives, stood in front of the altar and Mgr. Lavelle advanced to meet them. All being in readiness, the couple knelt upon the velvet cushion and the Monsignor proceeded with the marriage ceremony of the Roman Catholic church. The groom was given way by his elder brother and the bride by Alfred Vanderbilt. The ceremony occupied scarcely more than a quarter of an hour and at its conclusion the couple were warmly congratulated by the distinguished ecclesiastic. They at once proceeded to a second parlor where they received the congratulations of the guests. Among these were Baron Hengelbauer, the Austrian ambassador, and the various members of the Austrian embassy at Washington.

Breakfast and Reception.

In the reception room a line of tall South American tree ferns were arranged in front of all the windows. A number of these ferns were also used to form an canopy, from which was suspended a boll of lilies of the valley, under which the bridal couple received the congratulations of the guests. The dining room, the foyer hall and the breakfast room were all elegantly decorated. The bride's table, which was laid for eighteen covers, was located throughout its entire length with lilies and pink orchids. During the breakfast Franklin's orchestra played selections from Tchaikowsky's Russian Symphony and also from Wagner's "Siegfried" and "Tristan and Isolde."

Wedding Gown A Handsome Creation.

The wedding gown was an exquisite creation of white satin trimmed with point lace of almost fabulous cost. The train to the gown was five yards long, and was fastened to the shoulder just below the neckband. The satin of the train was plaited in double box plait, and was edged with an embroidery in seed pearl and silver. The bridal veil was fastened to the collar with a train of orange blossoms. The beautiful lace on the gown was made abroad from a special design. It is said that the bride's wedding gown and lingerie worn at the ceremony cost nearly $10,000.

Many Costly Gifts.

The Countess Szeghely will take with her to her new home in Hungary some wonderfully exquisite gifts. It is said that $500,000 would not be an extravagant estimate of the total value of the wedding presents. This does not include, of course, marriage settlements in cash. From the members of the Vanderbilt family come many superb additions to the countess' jewel-box as well as quantities of beautiful silver. From the relatives of the bridegroom the bride received some jewels that have belonged for generations to the Szeghely family, included among the exquisite gifts that the bride's infinite friends were privileged to view after the ceremony were a girdle of gold, set with diamonds; a pair of side combs set with pearls; several brooches of unique design and jeweled-horned pendants.

The president declares that ruin would have followed the adoption of any other policy towards the Philippines than that outlined by William McKinley and carried forward through these nine years, and asserts triumphantly that there is no brighter page in history than that dealing with the relations between the strong and the weak in those islands. He adds that the Philippines "have yet a long way to travel before they will be fit for complete self-government."

Taft Is Very Optimistic.

Secretary Taft's report records his observations on his recent visit to the Islands to the extent of nearly 80 printed pages. Generally speaking, the secretary is optimistic in a high degree in treating of this subject, even though he cannot fix a time for declaring the independence of the Islands. In answer to the critics who have made "the most astounding and unfair statements in respect to the cost to the United States of the Philippines," he figures out a total annual expenditure of $5,000,000 and he vigorously denies the failure of the Philippines.

He says that great changes have occurred in the Islands. The people are now anxious to have the American soldiers retained. There is a high standard of administration of justice. Nothing is more popular than the constabulary. There are no questions between the government and the Roman Catholic church, unless the Appalachian schism can be said to be involved. Peace prevails in a greater degree than ever before in the history of the Islands.

Recommendations to Congress.

The secretary is willing to limit the amount of sugar and tobacco that can be exported to the United States. He predicts development of business within 25 years that will make the Filipinos themselves stand high in the world's industrial populations. His recommendations are that Philippine products be admitted into the United States free of duty under reasonable limitations; that present restrictions be removed on the acquisition of mining properties; that the Philippine government be authorized to conduct an agricultural bank, and, finally, that the Islands be exempted from the operations of the coastwise shipping laws.

"That's a nice thing to say. In it you delicately infinite way of giving me my come?"

"Yes, thank you," nodded Miss Landis coolly; "You may go now."

"You're spoiled, that's what's the matter," retorted Ferrall wrathfully. "I thought I was to have this dance, You said!"

"I said 'perhaps,' because I didn't see Mr. Plank coming to claim it. Thank you, Kemp, for finding him!"

Her nod and smile took the edge from her malice; Ferrall, who really adored dancing, glared about for any body to dance with.

Sylvia, standing beside Plank, took up of him with her confident and friendly smile.

"You don't care to dance, do you? Would you mind if we sat out this dance?"

"If you'd rather," he said, so wistfully that she hesitated; then with a little shrug held one hand on his arm, and they swung out across the floor together into the scented whirl.

Plank, like many heavy men, danced beautifully, and Sylvia, who still loved dancing with all the ardor of a schoolgirl, permitted a moment or two of keen delight to sweep her dreamily from her purpose. But that purpose must have been a strong one, for she returned to it in a few minutes and, looking up at Plank, said very gently that she cared to dance no more.

Her hand resting lightly on his arm, it did not seem possible that any pressure of hers was directing them to the conservatory, yet he did not know where he was going, and she was familiar with the house, and they soon entered the conservatory, where, in the shadow of various palms, various youths looked up impatiently as they passed and various maidens sat up very straight in their chairs.

Threaded their dim way into the further recesses, they found seats among thickets of forced vines overhanging by early winter. A spring-like odor hung in the air. Somewhere a tiny fountain geyser burst in the darkness.

"Merton told me you had been asked," she said, "We have been so friendly. You're always asked me to dance whenever we have met, so I thought I'd save you one. Are you darter, Mr. Plank?"

He said he was very pleasantly, perfectly undivided and convinced of her purpose—a purpose never even faintly admitted, between them, and the old loneliness came over him again—not resentment, for he was willing that she should use him. Why not? Others used him, everybody used him, and if they found no use for him they let him alone. Mortimer, Fleetwood, Bedweather—all, all had something to extract from him. It was for that he was tolerated. He knew it. He had slowly and unwillingly learned it. His intrusion among these people, of whom he was not one, would be endured only while he might be turned to some account. The hospital used him, the clergy found plenty for him to do for them, the museum had room for other pictures of him. Who among them all had ever sought him without a motive? Who among them all had ever found meetish pleasure in him? Not I.

He wished she would come to her point, but he dared not lead her to it too busily, because her purpose and her point were supposed to be absolutely hidden from his thick and credulous understanding. It had taken him some time to make this clear to himself. Posing from suspicion through shaggy and overwrought feeling to dull certainty that she, too, was using him, harmlessly enough from her standpoint, but how bitterly from his alone could know.

The flutter of her fan meant impatience to learn from him what she had come to him to learn and then, satisfied, to leave him alone again and the peaceful solitude of clustered lights. He wished she would speak.

"I hope so," she said. "Is he better?"

"Yes, he is," she said slowly. "Is he better?"

"Yes, he is," she said. "Is he better?"

"What is the trouble with his business?"

"It is nothing about Amalgamated and Intercounty?"

"I think so."

"Is he worried?"

Plank said deliberately, "I should be if my interests were locked up in Amalgamated Electric."

"Could you tell me why that would worry you?" she asked, smiling permissively across at him.

"No," he said, "I can't tell you."

"Because I myself don't understand?"

She thought awhile, brushing the soft velvet of her mouth with the fan's edge, then, looking up confidently:

"Mr. Steward is such a boy, I'm so glad he has you to advise him in such matters."

"What matters?" asked Plank bluntly.

"Why, in financial matters."

"But I don't advise him."

"Why not?"

"Because he hasn't asked me to, Miss Landis."

"He ought to ask you. He must ask you. Don't wait for him, Mr. Plank, he is only a boy in such things."

And, as Plank was silent:

"You will, won't you?"

"Do what—make his business my business without an invitation?" asked Plank so quietly that she flushed with annoyance.

"If you pretend to be his friend, is it not your duty to advise him?" she asked impatiently.

"No; that is for his business associates to do. Friendship comes to grief when it crosses the frontiers of business."

"That is a narrow view to take, Mr. Plank."

"Yes, straight and narrow. The boundaries of friendship are straight and narrow. It is best to keep to the trodden path—best not to walk on the grass or trample the flowers."

"I think you are sacrificing friendship for an epigram," she said; careless of the undertone of contempt in her voice.

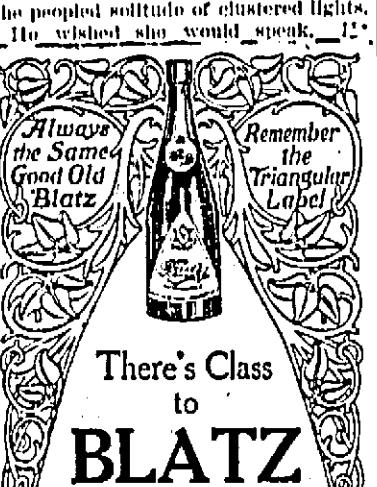

"I have never sacrificed friendship." He turned and looked at her pleasantly. "I never made an epigram consciously, and I have never required of a friend more than I had to offer in return. Have you?"

The flush of hot displeasure stained her cheeks.

"Are you really questioning me, Mr. Plank?"

"Yes. You have been questioning me rather seriously, have you not?"

"I did not comprehend your deli-

PROFESSOR PAUL MILIUKOV.
 Professor Paul Miliukov in his address last week threw defiance in the face of the Black Hundred and the Russian bureaucracy. He journeyed from Russia to America and back for the privilege of making one speech, and this may cost him his life. After his steamer had left the dock at New York on his return voyage to Russia, a cablegram was received from friends in Russia. It read: "Imperative you bring full report of your utterances in America." Fortunately Ambassador Rosen prevented an interview with President Roosevelt and thus saved any chance of international disputation. Professor Miliukov is leader of the radicals in the duma and has frequently brought the wrath of the Black Hundred upon himself. Last summer an American newspaper correspondent, after an interview with Miliukov, unashamedly picked up the professor's hat instead of his own. On the inside he noticed two crosses heavily drawn in black ink. "Yes," replied Miliukov, with a grim smile, "I dined at a restaurant the other day and on going out found these marks on my hat, which had been on a rack nearby. Sometime I may find the third cross beside the other two and that will mean—." He shrugged his shoulders significantly.

The czar will get accurate reports of all Miliukov said in America through the lips of trusted spies.
